To Whom It May Concern

As the Software Development Manager at Renson, I want to share my positive experience in working with the Indrivo team. For over one and a half year already, they have assisted us in the development of a series of web applications with very good results. These applications include both internal as well as external customer facing applications.

Although remote, our collaboration has grown very strong through daily interactions and open communication. The language barrier has been of no concern as their verbal and written English level is good to very good and has improved significantly during our collaboration.

The Indrivo team that we work with has proven to be very technically skilled. When it comes to modern web application and API development with .NET and ASP.NET MVC, there is little that the team should be taught. Besides their technical assets, they also think along with us when it comes to usability, customer experience and other non-technical quality attributes.

It is hence with the utmost pleasure and confidence that I recommend Indrivo as a partner.

Sincerely,

Christophe Herreman
Software Development Manager
