

To whom it may concern:

I would completely recommend Sue Harris and Westbury Communications as one of the most professional, highly respected public relations businesses working in the UK and Europe. As a wine specialist there is no-one with more experience.

Westbury Communications stand out because they know the needs and demands of their clients, but also the journalists and the customers they are hoping to engage with their campaigns. They have a unique ability to tackle problems from both sides and come up with solutions that are both relevant and effective for their clients and journalists and the different titles they are looking to work with. That's what gives them the edge, the point of difference as busy journalists know they can rely on Sue and her team to deliver and to give them the answers and the help they need before they need it.

Sue and her team are also a pleasure to work with and make working in wine the fun it is supposed to be. They also have the wine knowledge and expertise to work with people at all stages in their wine careers and development.
