The Swedish International Development Cooperation Agency (SIDA) is sponsoring the advanced international training program "Wind Power Development and Use" with the aim to contribute to capacity building and increased understanding of the importance of wind power in developing countries, including Republic of Moldova.

The program is arranged by LIFE Academy in close cooperation with Royal Institute of Technology in Sweden. In 2011, out of a large number of applicants, Igor Turcanu was selected as participant in the program. As part of the basis for the selection was the project "Wind Power for Moldova" submitted by Igor Turcanu. The aim of the project is to build a wind farm with capacity of 12 MW in Moldova. The project was further developed during the program with advisory support from LIFE Academy and Royal Institute of Technology.
